The Orange County Business Council is committed to maintaining and improving the high-quality workforce in Orange County. We believe that education is the key and that the family is a critical component in student success. Our Latino Educational Attainment Initiative (LEA) program successfully educates Orange County’s immigrant families (Latino, Korean and Vietnamese) on the skills needed to navigate California’s school system. This is done through the “10 Education Commandments for Families,” which empowers adults to be the best advocates for their children’s education and future.

Since 2004, the LEA Initiative has unified communities, students and families to produce a highly skilled workforce for Orange County. It has informed families, inspired teachers and assisted students with their education. The goal of the LEA Initiative is to ensure that every person has an equal opportunity to make a substantial contribution to Orange County and California as a whole.

We are confident that the “10 Education Commandments for Families” program will do the same for other communities across the state and country. It is our desire that this Trainers’ Manual will give communities the necessary tools and instruction on how to easily implement this effective family engagement program, which will have a direct impact on student achievement.
WHAT IS LATINO EDUCATIONAL ATTAINMENT?

The Latino Educational Attainment (LEA) initiative was created in the wake of The Orange County Register series “Our Children, Our Future,” which ran from June 2003 to March 2004. This special 12-part report addressed dozens of critical issues on why Latino school children lagged behind other groups in college preparation and academic achievement. The inability of immigrant families to easily and effectively navigate the educational system surfaced in each installment. These immigrant families wanted their children to succeed - become doctors, lawyers, business people – but they didn’t know how to help their children achieve their goals.

In mid-2004, the Orange County Business Council, The Orange County Register, the Orange County Department of Education, the Orange County United Way and others partnered to create the Latino Educational Attainment Initiative. The initiative’s goal was to help Latino families learn how to guide their children through our educational system. The initiative has attracted hundreds of parent volunteers, dozens of corporate, educational and non-profit sponsors and the support of many civic leaders.

The LEA working group surveyed and interviewed Latino parents to assess their knowledge of the U.S. education system, their children’s school, and how to get involved in their child’s education. Based on their findings, LEA created the 10 Education Commandments for Families, an easy to understand, accessible guide containing 10 key messages for families. In 2005, the booklet was completed and began to be implemented by four community based coalition partners.

What started with a small working groups and four coalition partners has had over 25 coalition partners working in over 150 neighborhoods in Orange County. The original booklet is now in its fourth edition and is available in four languages: English, Spanish, Korean, and Vietnamese. The result is an impressive cascade effect; nearly 500 community leaders have been trained as trainers; over 10,000 parents have completed the curriculum at community centers, non-profit service organizations, churches, or schools. It is estimated, based on 10 Commandment books distributed, that 30,000 families have been exposed to the key tools needed to be an effective advocate for their children. LEA has changed the day-to-day conversation among families in many neighborhoods through Orange County; education and academic achievement are better understood and are now a priority for tens of thousands of immigrant families.
Effective family involvement is a key factor for student academic success. This training manual is based on the 10 Education Commandments for Families which support family involvement in their children’s education. This material is designed as a tool to spark an interest in family involvement, improve knowledge of the educational system, and to bridge families to schools and teachers.

The main goal of the 10 Education Commandments for Families is to improve academic results by supporting family’s engagement in their child’s successful academic development. The program can be a stand-alone parent engagement program or used in conjunction with other programs. The goal is that the 10 key messages become part of the daily conversation and interaction among family members. Because the community is diverse and each geographical area has a variety of resources, the information presented in this guide is meant to be flexible and can be implemented by using one or more approaches.

Goals for Families
Increase awareness of the importance of school for their children’s future. Help to give them the tools to be able to execute the high expectations they have set for their children. Families will learn how to navigate the educational system and become effective advocates for their children’s education.

Goals for Students
The overarching goal is for students to reach the highest level of academic achievement possible with the encouragement of the educational systems, service agencies, businesses, and the constant support and dedication of families in their student’s education.

Goals for Schools
Assist schools to be receptive of families and their needs. Guarantee that school administrators and teachers are aware of the existing community resources available to help them interact positively with families.

Goals for Existing Programs and Community Groups
Extend existing programs’ reach and impact by being in alignment with each other and by speaking a common language about the importance of education.

Goals for Business
Raise the awareness of business executives about the need for long-term investment in improving the education of students from immigrant families. We envision businesses providing mentors and other resources to support families, schools, and community groups.

INTRODUCTION TO THE MANUAL

This Trainers’ Manual is designed to equip trainers to implement the 10 Education Commandments for Families with parents or guardians in any setting. The manual contains all the information, tools, activities, and tips to begin teaching the 10 Education Commandments for Families immediately. The Trainers’ Manual guides you through each lesson, from prep to each step of the instruction and the activities, homework, and additional resources for each commandment.

Each commandment is designed to offer information, activities to reinforce learning, and talking points for discussion. The activities and talking points used throughout this manual are meant to expand families existing experience and knowledge about the education system through practical group activities, discussions, and role-plays. In addition, participants will serve as resources for one another, drawing on their knowledge of their respective communities to inform the discussion. Respect for the experience of participants is crucial to the training process. Through the activities and sharing of peer experiences, families will learn the critical role they play in their students’ education and academic success.

This manual is comprised of the ten education commandments. They are in sequential order but designed in a modular fashion so that facilitators can combine commandments, give some commandments more or less time, all according to the training context and needs of the family. Facilitators should be prepared for each training session with this manual and any handouts, supplies, and equipment necessary. This manual has been designed for use by the facilitator, and is not intended to be distributed to the family in this form.
In the manual you will find the following information for each commandment:

Preparation for each Commandment: Convenient checklist to help prepare you for teaching each commandment.

As you create your lesson plans, according to the length of time for each session and how many sessions you have, pick and choose the activities or further talking points that are most suitable for your group of families. Activities, homework, additional resources are all optional and not an exhaustive list. Be creative and feel free to add your own activities and resources to reinforce the content.

The basic teaching flow for each commandment is to have an Introduction, review of the Tips for Success, and a Closure. How much time and attention you give to each one is up to you and what you believe is most relevant or helpful for your participants. The Appendix contains suggested lesson plans for the length and number of training sessions, as well as lesson plans for specific school age groups.

Learning Objectives: Concise statements about what families will learn from each commandment.

Introduction to Commandment: Gives reminders about the previous commandment and offers instruction on how to begin teaching on the commandment.

Tips for Success: There is specific information for each Tip for Success. See icons below that represent further explanation, activities, handouts, trainer tips, and additional resources. Not all Tips have each of the components.

Key for Tip for Success # __:

- 🎓 Further Explanation: Additional information to teach to families specific to each Tip or topics for discussion among the group.
- 🔧 Activities: Suggested activities to reinforce information in each Tip for Success.
- 📝 Handout: May be pages from the Family Workbook that can be reproduced or additional school information that you should collect prior to training session.
- 🎤 Trainer’s Tips: Helpful tips for you, including what information you need to collect or research before teaching each commandment.
- 🌐 Additional Resources: Online resources that may be helpful for families.

Closure: Suggestions on how to teach the class on the commandments. Includes wrap-up discussion questions, homework reminders, and reminders for the next session.
While it is important to always review all 10 Commandments to give families a proper overview of the educational system, it is encouraged to adjust the time spent on each commandment to tailor it to the grade levels of their children. Choose activities that are relevant to the grade levels. For instance, if the classroom is full of preschooler’s families, then bringing a college admissions counselor to talk about completing the FAFSA may not be the most applicable for them. Or if the families have high school students, then focusing on how the schools are structured is probably not as needed as they have already experienced the school structures. As mentioned in the Introduction to this manual, all lessons and activities should be adjusted to the group of families in the class.

Most “10 Education Commandments for Families” classes are broken into 4 week or 6 week sessions. And history of the class has shown that 4 or 6 weeks is the best length of time for families to commit and complete the class. The table below are suggested instructional models based on the number of weeks for the class and the grade levels. These models assume that each weekly class is two hours. If two hour classes are not feasible, then it is suggested that more sessions are added to cover the material.

INSTRUCTIONAL STRATEGIES, MANAGEMENT AND MATERIALS

Instructional Strategies:

Just like any child, adults learn best when they are truly engaged in what they are learning and have the opportunity to explore and discuss the concepts they are learning.

Adults learn best when instruction is:

1. Appropriately Challenging – Adults learn best when they start at their current level understanding and are challenged just beyond what they are comfortable doing on their own. Modify the instruction and activities to suit the families and their educational level.

2. Based on Real-World Problems and Situations – Be sure that the lessons and activities are in the right context for the group. Connect the material to where their children are currently at in school.

3. Meaningful and Interesting – The activities in each lesson are designed to reinforce the Tips for Success, but can be adjusted to suit the needs of the families. Some activities encourage them to work in groups, engage with a panel of experts, or do work on their own. Mix up the type of activities to keep the class interesting and engaging.

INTRODUCTION

• Introduce yourself and why you enjoy teaching these workshops.
• Have families introduce themselves and the ages of their children. If they are comfortable, ask participants to share what they hope to learn from this class.
• Encourage participants that this is an interactive class where they are encouraged to read, ask questions, and make comments. Remind them that they can highlight and write notes on their books. This book is meant to be used as a tool for the years to come.
• Invite someone to read one or two Tips for Success.

TIPS FOR SUCCESS

1. Know that everyone in the family has a role to play and something to contribute. Each person needs to identify their specific role in supporting a child’s education.
2. Identify how each family member will organize their time to support each child’s education.
3. Know the school goals and schools structure. Meet with school officials, such as the principal, teachers, liaisons, secretaries and parent representatives to build positive relationships.
4. Attend key events such as Back to School Night, Open House and Parent Conferences.
5. Identify and participate in support programs that are available at the school site and in your community. For example, these programs can be tutorials, homework clubs, peer mentoring, after school programs, etc. Resources can include education classes, informational nights, community services and involvement in committees/groups such as the Parent Teacher Association (PTA), School Site Council (SSC), English Learner Advisory Committee (ELAC), and the District English Learner Advisory Committee (DELAC).

LESSON REVIEW

• Reflective Dialogue: Ask your participants the following question.
  - Based on what we discussed today, what are you going to commit to contribute to your child’s education?
  - They can write or share their answer with a neighbor or to the group.
• Review homework assignments.
• Respond to any additional questions from Commandment 1.
• If you are teaching multiple commandments, then continue to the next commandment. If this commandment is the conclusion of your session, then thank them for their assistance and participation. Give them the reminder for the next sessions (day and time).
Recommended Time: 60 mins

Teaching Materials:
☐ Pens, highlighters
☐ White board with dry erase markers, post-it poster size paper and markers
☐ Wifi access, laptop and projector

Handouts:
☐ Workbook page 10 – School Information
☐ Workbook page 11 – Family Education Action Plan
☐ School Calendar
☐ Flyers from the school for any upcoming family group meetings
☐ Copy of the Schools and District’s goals for education
☐ Library Card application
☐ Information about local after school programs and other community resources
☐ Map of school

Research:
☐ School Information: school structure, school calendar, services, clubs, programs provided for families.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #1

Know that everyone in the family has a role to play and something to contribute. Each person needs to identify their specific role in supporting a child’s education.

Further explanation
- Read paragraph one of “How can Families Get More Involved with their Children’s Future” on page 12 in the workbook.
- Discuss the research indicating the impact father’s involvement has on children’s educational outcomes.

Activities
- Engage families in an informal conversation to discover their current involvement with their child’s education. Break the families into pairs or small groups to answer the following questions:
  - How have you been involved in your child’s education?
  - How did it feel?

After small group break out, facilitate a group discussion by charting the responses, charting 5-7 responses from the audience, depending upon your time.

- Fathers are far more than just “second adults” in the home. Involved fathers bring positive benefits to their children and have a profound influence on them. Some fathers may not be as involved as mothers. If this is a new role for fathers, explain how to start easing them in, 5 minutes at a time
  - Work in table groups to make a list of 5 minute activities to help engage father’s in their child(ren)’s lives at home and/or school.
  - As time permits, go around the room and have each table share 1 or 2 ideas with the group. Continue until each group has had a turn to share an idea the group hasn’t heard yet.

Trainer’s Tips
- Be aware that you may hear both positive and/or negative feelings from participants based on their past experiences. By charting what the families say, you are honoring their feelings and building trust. The chart is a third point that you can refer to later.
- Keep brainstorming charts to refer back to in Commandment 2.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #2

Identify how each family member will organize their time to support each child’s education.

Further explanation

- Read paragraph two of “How can Families Get More Involved with their Children’s Future” on page 9 in the workbook.

Activities

- Complete “Family Education Action Plan” Worksheet on page 11
  - Have families share how each family member currently help with education and have them write in their answers on the worksheet.
  - Next, have families brainstorm ways they can support their children or how older children can help their younger siblings.
  - Have them work in pairs to complete workbook page 11. If time permits, have 3 people share their notes.

Handout

- Workbook page 11 “Family Education Action Plan”

Trainer’s Tips

- Encourage each family to commit and get involved. Potential ways family members can help:
  - Young children can read books and do quiet activities during study time.
  - Older siblings can help younger children with homework or quiz them for upcoming tests.
  - Families can read books together, each taking turns reading out loud.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #3

Know the school goals and schools structure. Meet with school officials, such as the principal, teachers, liaisons, secretaries and parent representatives to build positive relationships.

Further explanation
- Talk about the importance of families introducing themselves to school personnel such as the principal and their child’s teacher(s).
- Give information about the school’s PTA, PTO, ELAC and other programs that participants can get involved in at their student’s school or district.

Activities
- School Information Sheet on page 10
  - If possible, make a copy of page 10 so that families can post in their home.
  - Provide instruction on how to complete this page as you model filling in the District’s information (Have this information ready beforehand). At the same time, discuss the role of the school district.
  - Have families complete the information pertaining to their child’s school as much as they can. This can be done individually at home, with a partner or in their group.
  - Have families complete the rest as a homework assignment. Give tips on how to acquire information such as asking the school counselor, taking the contact sheet to the school’s open house, asking one of your child’s teacher, or asking their child.
  - At next session, review and correct information as needed.
  - Add council members or other representative’s contact information that you feel is important for families to have.
- Invite the principal or other school official to the class to share the school and/or district’s goals or values.
- Invite the PTA or PTO president to the class to discuss ways to get involved.

Handout
- Any school handout on parent classes and programs being offered at school.
- Copy of the school or district’s goals or values. (See local school or district’s websites for information.)

Trainer’s Tips
- Provide specific number of minutes to work on the school information page. Use the timer on your phone to signal the end of the activity.
- Prior to training, research the school you are training to identify specific programs available to families.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #4

Attend key events such as Back to School Night, Open House and Parent Conferences.

Further explanation

- Inform families that these events are a great place to meet the principal, teachers, and other school staff, as stated in Tip for Success #3.

Activities

- Show the families the district website, specifically the parents’ section and how to navigate the site. If necessary, show families how to translate the webpages into their preferred language.
- Pass out the school and district calendars
  - Teach families to read the calendars by asking them to identify the key dates.
  - Ask families to highlight these important school activities and take notes related to the purpose of each event.
- Pass out a map of the school and have families highlight the school office, their students’ classrooms, and other important locations on the school campus.
- Ask families to share their experiences with Back to School Nights, Open Houses, and Parent Teacher Conferences. Problem solve with the participants if any concerns or issues arise.

Handout

- School and district calendars.

Trainer’s Tips

- Test your internet connection, if available, and have the district website ready. If you do not have internet access, you can use screen shots in your power point.
- For a spring training, focus on the next academic year school calendar during training.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #5

Identify and participate in support programs that are available at the school site and in your community. For example, these programs can be tutorials, homework clubs, peer mentoring, after school programs, etc. Resources can include education classes, informational nights, community services and involvement in committees/groups such as the Parent Teacher Association (PTA), School Site Council (SSC), English Learner Advisory Committee (ELAC), and the District English Learner Advisory Committee (DELAC).

Further explanation
- Explain each of these support programs and the purpose of each one. Give participants meeting times, dates, and locations.

Activities
- Ask families what programs/resources there are in their community? You can chart their responses and have participants write down so they can keep as a resource.
- The local library is a great community resource. Talk about the programs they offer families and pass out a library card application for those that don't have one. Help participants complete library application.
- This is a good opportunity to invite a speaker from a resource agency to share information about their services.

Handout
- Library card application.
- Any information you are able to find in your community such as local Family Resource Centers, libraries, tutoring programs, etc. Check your local 211 website for community resources. www.211.org.
- The California Department of Education website also lists community and school resources. http://www.cde.ca.gov/ls/pf/
- Create a handout with parent group meeting times, dates, and locations.

Trainer's Tips
- Test your internet connection, if available, and have the district website ready. If you do not have internet access, you can use screen shots in your power point.
- Research the parent and support programs and have meeting dates, times, and locations ready for your participants. Prepare a handout.
INTRODUCTION

• Begin by welcoming participants to class as they walk in. Remind them to sign in and take a pencil/highlighter. Do the same at the beginning of each commandment. Look at the beginning of Commandment 7 (Pg. 52) as an example.

• State the focus of Commandment 2 by reading page 12 aloud.

• Have two or three participants respond to the question: “What are you doing at home to support learning at school?”

TIPS FOR SUCCESS

1. Homework is intended to provide appropriate practice for concepts learned in school. If your child does not seem to understand concepts that are involved in the homework, be sure to contact the teacher to let him/her know that your child is struggling.

2. Find out when and where your child studies best. Some kids like to study in the morning, others in the afternoon or evening. Allow your child to study in school, in the library, or in an environment that is suitable for the family. It is also common for students to meet with classmates in study groups. Provide adequate space and quiet time at home for your child to do his/her homework and study.

3. Help create and maintain a balanced routine at home by having schedules for every family member. Everyone should know their schedule, including the times for homework, meals, and free-time activities, chores, T.V. or other electronic devices.

4. Monitor your child’s progress with homework. Homework can have an impact on your child’s grades, so make a habit of checking the Parent Portal to help keep your child on track for completing and turning in assignments.

5. Take advantage of resources that can help you help your child with homework. Ask about homework clubs and tutoring opportunities at your local library or at your child’s school. Ask for help when you have questions or concerns. It is a sign of strength and wisdom. Both you and your child will benefit when you have the answers you seek.

LESSON REVIEW

• Reflective Dialogue: Encourage families to reinforce that education is their child’s priority.

• Homework Ideas:
  - Encourage families to review handout with their children and to complete monthly calendar with their family.
  - Encourage families to find out how much time their students are expected to spend on homework each day or week.
Recommended Time: 60-75 minutes

Teaching Materials:
- Pens, highlighters
- Wifi access, laptop and projector
- School Information from Commandment 1
- Charts from Commandment 1 regarding how parents help with homework
- Homework planner sample

Handouts:
- Weekly Family Schedule (Appendix 1)
- List of afterschool programs in your area

Research:
- Identify school/classroom homework policy. Review teacher website for homework.
- Clubs and programs that support children’s learning.

TIP FOR SUCCESS #1

Homework is intended to provide appropriate practice for concepts learned in school. If your child does not seem to understand concepts that are involved in the homework, be sure to contact the teacher to let him/her know that your child is struggling.

Further explanation
- Each School District has a homework policy that provides guidelines on how much time a child should spend on homework by grade level.
- Be aware that individual teachers have their own homework expectations, so be sure to ask each teacher.
- Encourage your student to keep a school planner and record their homework in it each day. Check this on a regular basis to make sure your child(ren) is keeping up with his or her homework assignments.

Activities
- Refer back to the district website, specifically the teachers’ classroom page. Find where they post homework assignments and review with participants. If you do not have internet access, you can use screen shots of these pages in your power point.
- Table Talk: “What is your child’s teacher’s homework expectations? How did you learn this?” Give participants a few minutes to discuss these questions at their tables or with a partner.

Trainer’s Tips
- Some teachers use a homework planner to assign homework daily, weekly or monthly. Get samples of these homework planners to share in the training.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #2

Find out when and where your child studies best. Some kids like to study in the morning, others in the afternoon or evening. Allow your child to study in school, in the library, or in an environment that is suitable for the family. It is also common for students to meet with classmates in study groups. Provide adequate space and quiet time at home for your child to do his/her homework and study.

Further explanation

- Get to know your child by asking or observing what study habits work best for him/her. You can also ask the child’s teacher.
- Create a place at home where the child can do his/her homework quietly and without distractions. Have a small desk in a bedroom or in the living room where child can work on homework. Have a cupboard or box where child can store his/her school supplies.
- Given some of your families circumstances, tight living conditions can make this difficult. However, you must encourage them to find a way to get it done for the academic success of their child.

Activities

- Brainstorm with families how they can support their children at home. Some examples include providing an empty desk, turning off the T.V., or having younger children play in a different room.

Handout

- School and district calendars.

Trainer’s Tips

- Sharing personal experiences related to how/where you studied as a child can put the families at ease. (e.g. on your bed, at the kitchen table)
TIP FOR SUCCESS #3

Help create and maintain a balanced routine at home by having schedules for every family member. Everyone should know their schedule, including the times for homework, meals, free-time activities, chores, T.V. or other electronic devices.

Further explanation

- Make sure that your child is not “over scheduled” with extra-curricular activities or responsibilities. (See online resource below)
- Research shows that children and adults thrive on routine because routines give us a sense of security and help develop self-discipline.
- Ask families what their thoughts are related to routines. Can they identify a routine that they rely on during their daily schedule? (For example: waking up and getting dressed, bedtime routine, etc.)
- Remind families that they can help their child make homework a habit by supporting and respecting the routine that has been established for homework.

Activities

- Create a Weekly Family Schedule (Workbook page 15 or Appendix 1)
  - Review the sample weekly schedule on page 14. Explain to participants that every family will create a schedule that fits their specific needs.
  - Using workbook page 15 or copies of the handout from the appendix, have families begin by blocking out their child’s school hours, weekly activities such as church, sports, lessons, etc.
  - Continue by identifying meal time, bedtime, wake up, and breakfast.
  - With the remaining time in your weekly schedule identify the best time for homework (remember the general guideline for homework time = 10 minutes for every year in school), free play, reading time, and chores.
  - If time permits, have families share schedules in small groups.
  - Encourage families to get and consider child’s input on completed family weekly schedule and then post in a prominent place so all family members can follow the weekly schedule.

Handout

- Weekly family schedule (Appendix 1)

Trainer’s Tips

- Be aware that every family has a different schedule which means the most effective one is when it fits into the family’s routine.
- Familiarize yourself with the resource below.

TIP FOR SUCESS #4

Monitor your child's progress with homework. Homework can have an impact on your child’s grades, so make a habit of checking the Parent Portal to help keep your child on track for completing and turning in assignments.

Further explanation

- Be sure to review your child’s homework every night. It is important for children to understand that adults are aware of their homework and class projects. Ask questions about their homework to help your child review the concepts. (e.g. Tell me how you got your answer.)
- Discuss the benefit of study groups with participants. Explain that study groups provide an opportunity for students to work cooperatively on group assignments and review and practice concepts taught in class.
- Some assignments will require group study. If your child will be studying at a classmate’s house, be sure to communicate with their parents to ensure they are studying.

Activities

- Walk participants through Parent Portal
  - Before class, ensure that you have internet connectivity.
  - Pull up the online Parent Portal. If you don’t have access to it, ask a participant if they would login to their account. Be sure that any sensitive material is not shown to the class.
  - Walk through the portal to show participants what information can be found here.

Trainer’s Tips

- Check for online connectivity before the class.
- If you are not able to access the portal online, you can paste screenshots of the portal into a PowerPoint presentation.
- Learn if and how the portal can be translated into another language.
TIP FOR SUCCESS #5

Take advantage of resources that can help you help your child with homework. Ask about homework clubs and tutoring opportunities at your local library or at your child’s school. Ask for help when you have questions or concerns. It is a sign of strength and wisdom. Both you and your child will benefit when you have the answers you seek.

Activities

• Review the school information handout from Commandment 1 to point out who to contact at the school that can share this information.

• Review brainstorm charts from previous Commandment to identify homework support families are already using. Ask families in the training if they are aware of more resources in the neighborhood you can add to your charts.

Handout

• Create a list of afterschool programs with location, hours available, ages accepted, and costs to the programs.

Trainer’s Tips

• Participants in the training can share additional resources they are aware of in the neighborhood.

• Research afterschool homework or study programs, such as the Boys and Girls Club, YMCA and the local library. Compile a list of available programs in the area.
